State Fire School At ISU June 11th

Ames — Between 500 and 600 firemen from paid and volunteer departments from all sections of Iowa will attend the 44th Annual Iowa State Fire School at Iowa State University June 11-14.

Sessions will be held at the University Armory as well as at the Fire Service Extension demonstration area northeast of the campus.

The Iowa State Fire School is the oldest organized fire education and training program in the nation and has been carried on continuously by the university since 1924. Some special features, in addition to the basic phases of fire service training, will include demonstrations on handling large fire situations in local communities, fire equipment considerations, fire protection management, controlling flammable liquid and gas fires and technical section meetings.

Experts from all parts of the nation will be on the instructional staff for the 1968 school and all local firemen will have an opportunity to visit with staff members about special problems in their communities. As in the past, an extensive exhibit of apparatus and equipment will be on display.

City councilmen, civil service commissioners as well as other city officials are invited to attend the meetings during the fire school. The school is under the direction of the Iowa State University Fire Service Extension staff.

Hair Lift

A good way to lift yourself out of the end of the winter slump is to brighten your appearance now. You are probably tired of your hair style, your makeup and your dark woolsens. Start with the hair. How much better it would look with a high-lighting tint. Is it time to consider the value of coloring because gray hairs suddenly have increased? Or would a rinse for gray hair be the glamorizing trick you need?

The trick to a successful future is the proper preparation for it now. Let us show you the way.
